- The game starts with X playing wherever they want in any of the 81 empty spots.
- This move 'sends' their opponent to its relative location. For example, if X played in the top right square of their local board, then O needs to play next in the local board at the top right of the global board, as shown in Figure 1.
- Figure 1:

- O can then play in any one of the nine available squares in that local board (with the orange border in Figure 1), each move sending X to a different local board. For example, if O marks the bottom middle square then X has to be marked in the bottom-middle local board as shown in Figure 2.
- Figure 2:

- If a move is played so that it is to win a local board by the rules of standard TicTacToe, then the entire local board is marked as a victory for the player in the global board as shown in Figure 3.

- Figure 3 :

- Once a local board is won by a player, or it is filled completely, no more moves may be played in that board. If a player is sent to such a board, then that player may play on any other local board. See such a case in Figure 4.
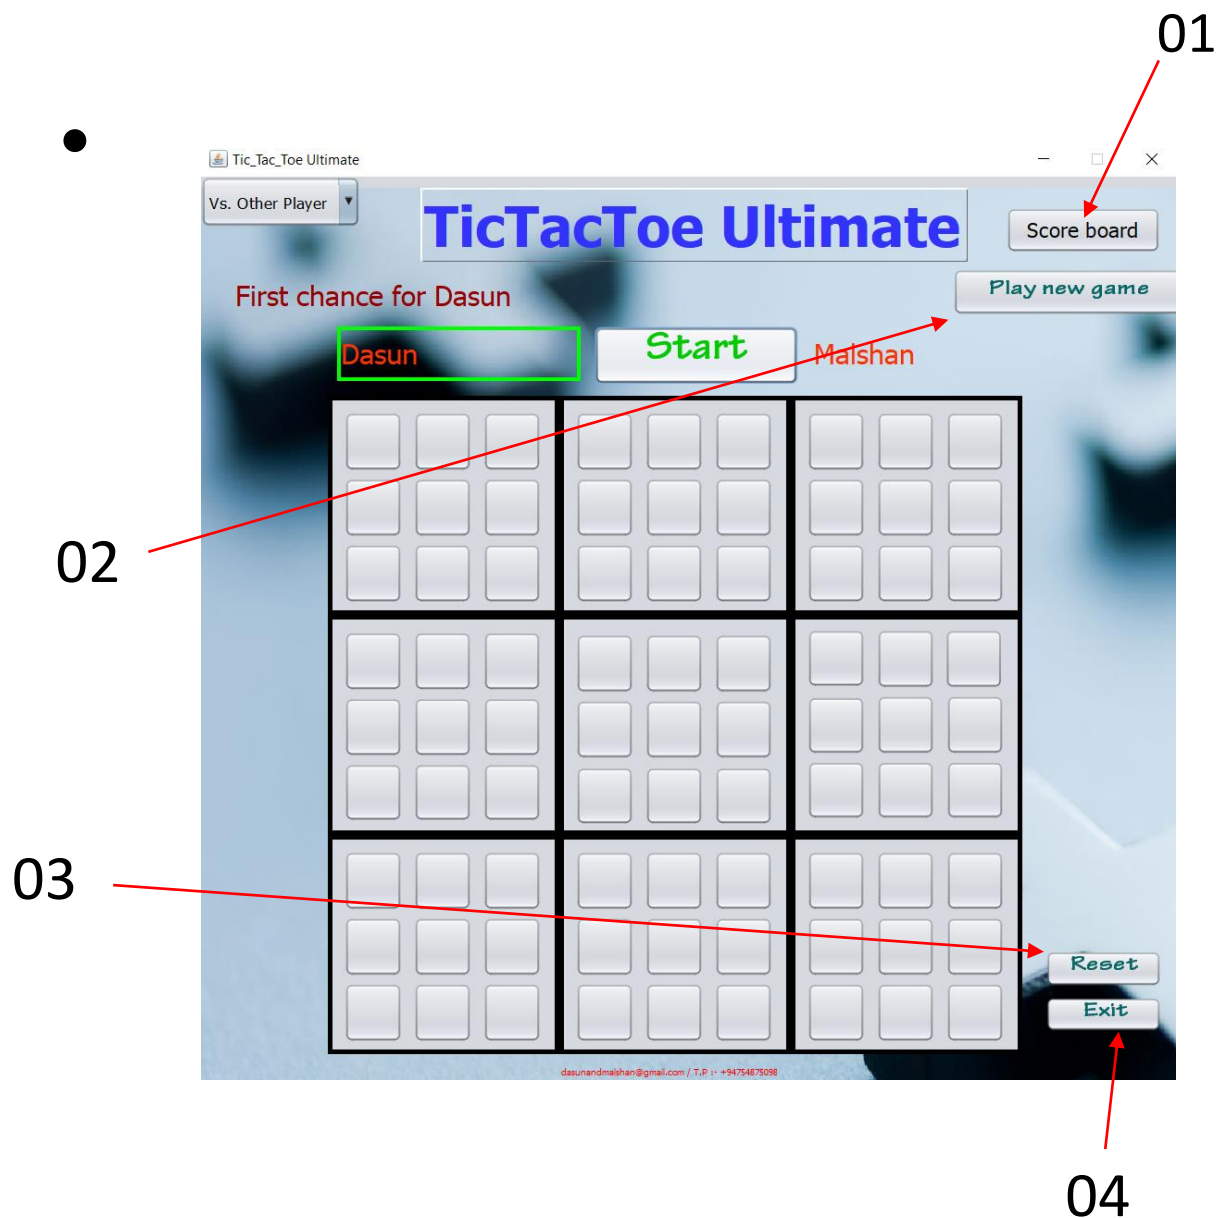

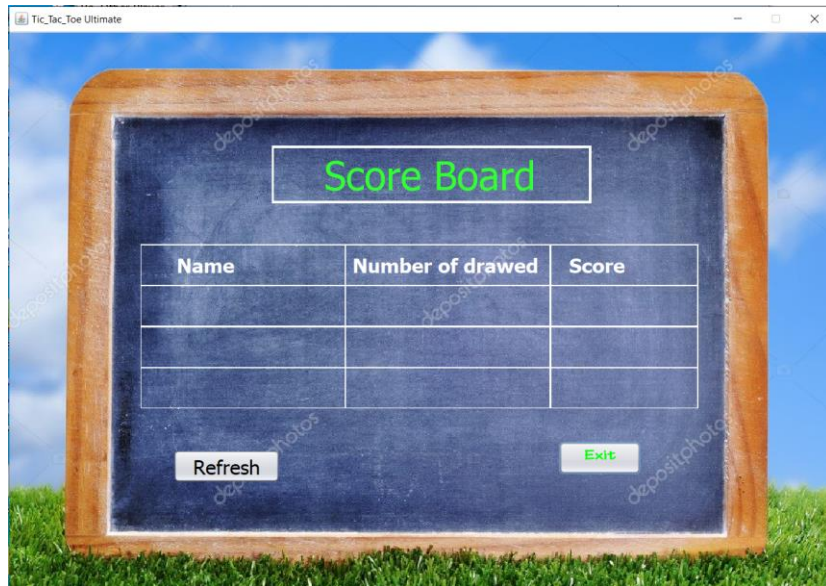

- Figure 4:

- Game play ends when either a player wins the global board, or there are no legal moves remaining, in which case the game is a draw.
